The Following does NOT constitute part of the data sheet and is for advise only.

Suitability of the advise should be ascertained on an individual level before use. SK Wiring does not accept any responsibility for injury caused by following this advise

Some people are sensitive to Glass Fibre irritation. This sensitivity is generally short lived and usually affects the area of skin between the fingers, and any other area that maybe exposed to glass fibre. The irritated area usually shows as small red dots, that are itchy and become more itchy if scratched or subjected to elevated ambient temperatures.

The MSDS sheet specifies that the affected area should be flushed with cold water, whilst this is effective at calming the affected area it does not always solve the problem. The advise issued to SK Wiring employees is as follows, however it must be stressed that each individual is risk assessed to ascertain suitability of this process.

Wash hands under warm running water, as warm as the individual can comfortably handle, with soap and water, lightly / gently scrub the affected area with a nail brush or similar in a circular motion. Rinse the affected area in cold water until irritation has stopped. Always use running water, stationary water may spread the glass onto other skin areas. Apply a good quality moisturiser.

If areas of affected skin come into contact with clean clothing it is advised that loose fitting open weave fabrics be worn, fabrics such as cotton, denim etc. may increase irritation.

Good industrial hygiene is the best way to avoid irritation, the wearing of gloves, eye protection and if deemed necessary respiratory protection should be considered.

THIS ADVISE IS FOR IRRITATION OF THE HANDS ARM LEGS AND SHOULD NEVER BE USED IN SENSITIVE AREAS SUCH AS AROUND THE EYES OR GROIN. IT IS THE INDIVIDUALS RESPONSIBILITY TO ASSESS IF THIS ADVISE IS SUITABLE FOR THEM. THIS IS FOR GUIDANCE ONLY
